Since the article Reiki In Hospitals appeared several years ago in the Reiki News, there has been a significant increase in the number of hospitals where Reiki treatments are offered. This has been brought about as much by those who have been working to bring Reiki into hospitals as by patients who are requesting it.

There are now hundreds of individuals as well as some organizations who are providing Reiki treatments to patients in hospitals. Some have done an exceptional job and have worked closely with the hospital administration to create protocols, guidelines and ethics that allow Reiki to be practiced in a way where the hospital, the practitioners and the patients are all happy. This is a wonderful achievement and a sign of the times. Integrative medicine is now the wave of the future and many hospitals are seeking help in getting a program started. At the same time, there are many Reiki practitioners who would like to get Reiki treatments started in a hospital or clinic and could benefit from the experience of those who have already been successful.

The purpose of this support group is to connect people who are practicing Reiki in a hospital or clinical setting or would like to start so they can share experiences and support each other in this effort. The direction this is going in indicates that national standards for Reiki and all integrative modalities are becoming an important topic. How this is guided and by whom is something Reiki people need to be part of so that Reiki like solutions are created where everyone wins. My sense is that this is possible as long as we are aware of each others work and join together to protect the value Reiki can provide to everyone.

By filling out a questionnaire, your name and information will be added to the reports that will appear on this site including:

- 1) A roster of all those doing Reiki in hospitals.
- 2) A list of all hospitals where Reiki is practiced including important details.

3) A list of all Reiki research, both completed and in process. In addition, articles on how to get Reiki started in a hospital or clinic and other helpful information will be included.

This service is free at this time and a national Reiki membership organization may develop out of it.

If you are currently giving Reiki treatments in a hospital or clinic or if you would like to start, you are eligible to join this support group. All you have to do is fill in the questionnaire that will be available when we formally announce this site, so we can better understand your situation and provide the support you need.

Enter your email address above so we can send you an announcement when this site has been completed and is available for use.
